Paddle the Pocomoke River

...an unsurpassed way to experience one of Delmarva's natural wonders.

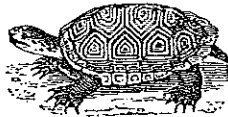

Paddle gently in one of our Old Town canoes or kayaks through shady caverns of foliage. Novice or experienced paddlers will find the flatwater Pocomoke river a delight!

See the sun-dappled surface glisten as you paddle past fallen logs, clusters of pink or white blossomed water lilies, or the exposed "knees" of the bald cypress. The Pocomoke River corridor is home to one of the northernmost reaches of the cypress.

Notice sun-worshipping turtles basking on a log. The shy turtles retreat to the river if you approach too quickly. Playful otters occasionally streak by, diving and searching for their supper.

Watch carefully to see a bald eagle that may swoop overhead, or be startled by a great blue heron as it swooshes by. Egrets are often seen wading in the river's swampy reaches.

Fish for the scrappy gar - our "freshwater marlin" - or for large mouth bass, catfish, shad, yellow and white perch, pickerels, and eels.

Exercise your sense of wonder at the marvelous birds that flit through the undergrowth at the river's edge where white-tailed deer often pause to drink.

Accept the challenge of the wind and the tide on the open reaches of the river near the 300- year old village of Snow Hill. You'll be glad you chose to come to the Eastern Shore, to Worcester County, to our Pocomoke River.

A day on the Pocomoke River is a day in paradise...

The Pocomoke River is a fragile resource that we treasure. We ask that you bring back all litter; we will be happy to collect and recycle it.

In addition to the natural beauties of the Pocomoke, picturesque Snow Hill, founded in 1642, offers visitors a number of attractions including the Julia A. Purnell Museum, the Mount Zion One-Room School Museum and many lovely old homes dating from the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries. Just outside town on the Nassawango Creek is the ongoing restoration of Furnace Town.

Overnight accommodations are available at several local B&B's and there are motels and hotels in nearby Pocomoke City and Salisbury. Within blocks of our shop you'll find restaurants, art galleries and gift shops.

Nearby, the Pocomoke River State Park straddles the river with cabins and campsites available at Shad Landing and Millburne Landing.
